#InspiredToLearn COVID-19 Update - Monday 4th January 2021 (2)

Dear Parents and Carers,

Following the Prime Minister's announcement tonight, it's really important for us all to keep our children at home from TOMORROW (Tuesday 5th January 2021), where possible - we know this is hard on everyone.

School and Pre-School will only open to children who absolutely need to attend - those whose parents are identified as key workers, those who have a social worker or children who have an Education, Health and Care Plan.

If your child(ren) absolutely needs to attend, please email me to let me know. Anyone with immediate questions should also email me directly at the same address - headteacher@princeofwales.dorset.sch.uk.

The fewer children that are at school will minimise the risk of the virus spreading and infecting vulnerable people in our communities.

If you have no other option, we are here to support.

We are not going to turn anyone away.

KEY MESSAGE - UPDATED

On Friday, the Government updated it's guidance on provision for critical workers. The guidance states that all parents and carers who are critical workers should keep their child at home if at all possible.

The 'R Rate' in the South West is now the highest in England.

The fewer children that are at school will minimise the risk of the virus spreading and infecting vulnerable people in our communities.

POSITIVE VIBES - #INSPIREDTOLEARN

Stay Safe

Dear Ofsted,

Following Gavin Williamson's comment last week, encouraging parents to report schools to Ofsted regarding their online provision during lockdown, we wanted to share our experience of the exceptional work that our children's school, The Prince of Wales First School in Dorchester, Dorset, has been doing throughout the pandemic.

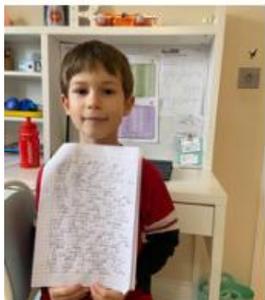

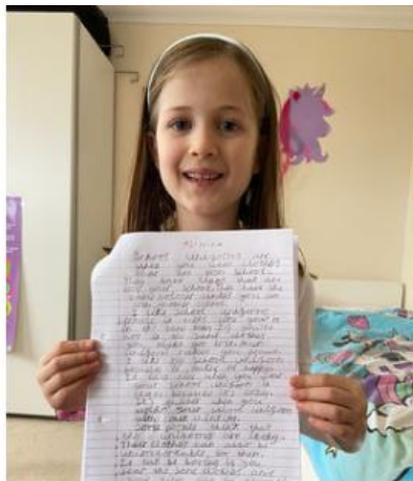

The Prince of Wales is a school that normally goes above and beyond to support all its' children. Despite the growing practical and financial challenges imposed by the pandemic, the dedicated staff team has somehow managed to not only maintain their already incredible standards, but also exceed expectations in supporting the learning and welfare of the children, and the well-being of all members of the school community, including parents and siblings. Since the first lockdown began at the end of March 2020, the staff have continually adapted, working creatively and tirelessly to ensure that the children are impacted as little as possible by this crisis. During the 2020 lockdown, they were already committing to providing a comprehensive daily virtual learning programme for all children from Preschool age to Year 4. This included a daily virtual assembly with special guest speakers, and two other daily live feeds featuring members of the leadership and teaching staff. They made regular well-being calls to all families, delivered food parcels to vulnerable and key-worker families and other surprise packages to all children containing treats and fun resources to complement the virtual learning package. All of this served the important purpose of not only keeping children positively engaged with their education, but also keeping us all socially connected, which has proved vital for the well-being of children and parents alike. For the last four weeks of the summer term, when most primary-age children in England were still learning at home, the Prince of Wales School gave every one of their pupils the opportunity to return to school, having sourced enough temporary classrooms to allow for Covid-safe bubbles of no more than fifteen, all staffed by a qualified teacher or senior teaching assistant. This made an incredible difference to us all, allowing for four weeks of relative normality before the children were off again for the long summer break. The school's ELSA provision has also increased since the beginning of the pandemic to offer five full days of dedicated well-being support.

It is quite ironic that Mr Williamson should think that we as parents might wish to complain about our school's online provision. Even after the conflicting government messages regarding whether schools should remain open or close, the staff at the Prince of Wales managed to deliver, immediately. They communicated their support to parents at the earliest possible opportunity after it was announced on Monday 4 January that schools were to close. Within an hour of Boris Johnson's statement to the nation, parents received an email with links to an entire five days' worth of age-appropriate home-learning for all pupils at the school. How? Because the school had prepared for all eventualities. Now that those five days of learning are complete, we have received tailor-made distance learning packages for our children's classes, with hard copies of booklets and worksheets, as well as a series of videos recorded by their own class teachers talking them through each lesson. This will all have taken an enormous amount of time to prepare. The new learning programme follows (as closely as is possible) the schemes that would have been used currently if all the children had still been in school. Laptops and classroom furniture has been made available to all families who need it, to ensure that all children can access the learning. The three daily live on-line feeds resumed on Tuesday 5 January and we have every faith that, despite the challenges ahead, this incredible school will help us all stay buoyant and connected. We know we speak for many fellow parents when we say that the school has done everything it possibly can to help and support us through these times. What a shame we cannot rely on the government of our country to do the same.

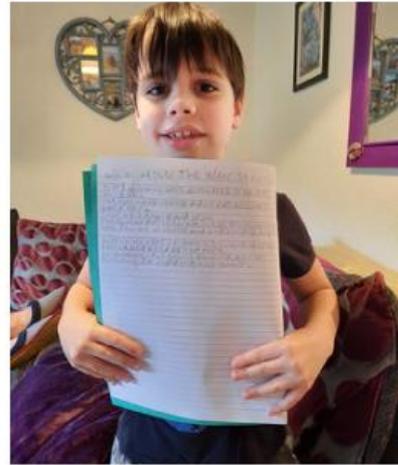

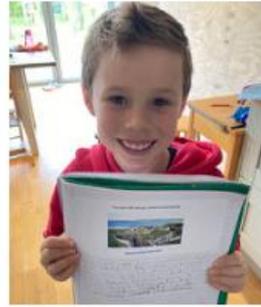

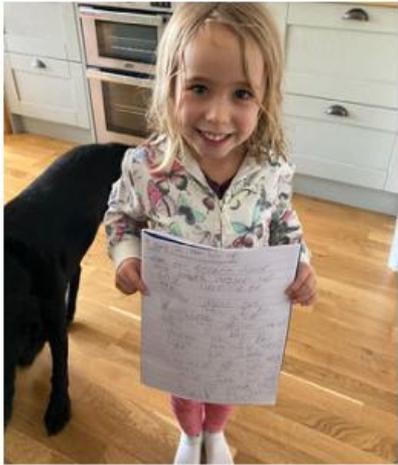

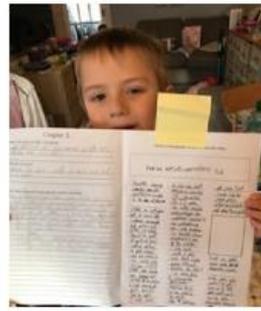

Yours faithfully,

Good evening,

As we approach half-term, I just wanted to thank you and your staff for all you've done for the children since the start of the current lockdown, and in particular the Year 4 Team. I'm lucky enough to work part-time which enables me to support XXXX at home with his learning.

As you know, one of the main topics the Year 4 children learned about was World War II. It is an understatement to say that Mrs Browne did an incredible job. Not only the content and activities proposed were very well chosen and balanced, but above all, her sensitive and thoughtful approach to this topic has been very much appreciated.

She put the emphasis on the emotional aspect of the war, encouraging the children to develop their empathy by thinking about what others (children, parents, soldiers...) must have felt during the war, whether allies or "enemies". I imagine it would be very easy to take a "cold" and factual look at these events. But thanks to Mrs Browne's compassionate approach, this has generated some really interesting, heartfelt and often emotional discussions at home.

In one of the videos we watched from BBC Teach, there was some historical footage from the Dresden bombings. The footage only lasted a few seconds, but my paternal grand-father, XXXX 's great grand-dad, was in there as a prisoner of the Nazis. To imagine him enduring those bombings and still coming out of there alive has been a truly humbling and powerful experience.

So thank you very much for all your time, dedication and efforts. I'm sure it takes a lot longer to plan all these online lessons as opposed to delivering them in the classroom. All your hard work is very much appreciated and will undoubtedly have lasting positive impact on all the children.

Best wishes, XXXX XXXX
